LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL'S DIGEST

AB 2915, Saldana. Veterinary medicine: licensure.

Existing law, the Veterinary Medicine Practice Act, provides for the licensure and regulation of the practice of veterinary medicine.

Existing law provides that the laws regulating the practice of veterinary medicine do not apply to, among others, unlicensed personnel employed by the Department of Food and Agriculture or the United States Department of Agriculture when, in the course of their duties, they are directed by a veterinarian supervisor to conduct an examination, obtain biological specimens, apply biological tests, or administer medications or biological products as part of government disease or condition monitoring, investigation, control, or eradication activities.

This bill would also, until January 1, 2011, exempt from the laws regulating the practice of veterinary medicine veterinarians employed by a city, city and county, or county who meet specified criteria and who are conducting activities, under direct supervision, related to pathology and epidemiology on dead animals as part of specified government programs.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:
